Readers are reminded of our Money Matters event to help residents and businesses fight back against the credit crunch is set to take place this weekend.

The Echo-organised event aims to give people more control over their finances during the economic downturn.

The range of stands at the event are varied, offering advice on everything from energy-saving and refinancing to affordable housing, greener driving and pensions.

There will also be a financial adviser to offer advice on claiming compensation from mortgage, credit card and car finance companies.

Helen Covell, from the Echo's marketing team, said: "The event is aimed to bring local people and businesses together to fight back against the credit crunch."

The event, sponsored by Lincolnshire Co-operative Funeral Bond, is being held at the Engine Shed on Saturday between 11am and 4pm.
